

Insurance Fraud

How do Americans feel about insurance fraud?

You might be surprised to learn a study found that nearly one in four Americans say it's OK to defraud insurers. Another study revealed that nearly one in 10 Americans would commit insurance fraud if they knew they could get away with it.

Well, if you have larceny in your heart, consider this: Investigations into suspected fraud and the number of cases prosecuted has grown. In addition, criminal convictions of people for insurance fraud have increased significantly. So don't let greed get the best of you. You may find it difficult to spend that loot if you are behind bars.

The Coalition Against Insurance Fraud has been at the forefront of fighting insurance fraud. If you would like to visit their Insurance Hall of Shame or learn how you can recognize and prevent insurance fraud, click here.

A graphic with a parchment-like background. It contains the text: "The Coalition Against Insurance Fraud has been at the forefront of fighting insurance fraud." and the Coalition Against Insurance Fraud logo and name at the bottom.

*The Coalition Against Insurance Fraud has been at the forefront of fighting
insurance fraud.*

Coalition Against Insurance Fraud